

Dive 83 - Hurghada - 17-04-2013

Gota Abu Ramada reef is a medium sized, oval-shaped reef with a shallow, flat, sandy seabed surrounding it. This is one of the most popular sites for your first dive from the day boats in Hurghada. The shallow depths (around 10 metres to the seabed at the base of the reef) make it an ideal spot for dive guides to bring divers they have not dived with before and give a picturesque dive whilst assessing dive capabilities for dive planning purposes later in the week. There is something here for all levels of diver, whilst giving an easy introduction to Red Sea diving.

The shallow reef has plenty of coral outcrops away from the main reef to explore around and there is an abundance of life wherever you look.

Because of the shallow depth there is plenty of light making it an excellent dive for taking photos. There are a couple of eagle rays that have made this reef their home and are often come across by divers. Crocodilefish and stonefish are also something to look out for.
